Inquest Into the Bellevue Disaster

The inquest upon the thirty-one miners who met their death in the Bellevue mine on December 9th, commenced on Monday last in the Miners' hall at Bellevue. A large number was present and much interest manifested.

The first witness called was the secretary of the local union who gave evidence regarding the notice which he as secretary had wired to chief mine inspector Stirling, on Dec. 9th, asking for an inspection of the mine.

Dr. Macdonald was next sworn and gave evidence as to the appearance of the dead men, stating that it was his opinion that the men died from the effects of a "after-damp."

At this point a deadlock took place when jury foreman Albert Cameron stated he did not feel competent to go into the investigation of the causes which led to the explosion.

Juryman Burnett also rose and said that he could not give an unprejudiced verdict upon the causes of the explosion.

This unprecedented situation caused a deadlock and Governor Pinkney adjourned the sitting to 1:30 p.m. After efforts to get instructions from Edmonton were unavailing and after the session had adjourned and met three times, matters were no further advanced as those two jurymen refused to recant their views.

When the sitting had again taken place at 7 p.m. it was still evident that nothing could be done without instructions from the attorney-general's department and the coroner again adjourned the sitting to Tuesday, January 3rd.

A Successful Campaign

The series of evangelistic meetings which were begun in Blaimore on Sunday, December 4th, and which are brought to an end on Tuesday last, were without a doubt one of the best and most successful evangelistic campaigns that have ever been conducted in the Pass.

The Baptist Union of Western Canada made a very wise choice when sending Rev. J. W. Litch to Blaimore to conduct those services, for he is especially fitted for the work and is one of the brightest, ablest, most influential and powerful preachers that have ever addressed an audience in this district.

All during the campaign Mr. Litch worked hard and the great result of his strenuous work must indeed be gratifying to the church as well as to himself.

Catholic Order of Foresters

Court No. 1656, of the Catholic Order of Foresters, was instituted in Frank on Sunday last. Members of the Catholic faith were present from Hildesheim, Bellevue and Coleman to join the order.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing term:
Chief Ranger, A. V. Lang.
V. G. S., S. Janotak.
Secretary, H. Murphy.
Treasurer, J. M. McKinnon.
Speaker, J. Cardell.
Outside Sentinel, J. Walker.
Inside Sentinel, J. B. McKinnon.
Trustees: J. McLaughlin, C. McGillivray, J. Kubina.

A team belonging to the Blaimore Livery ran away on Friday last, smashing up the wagon and doing considerable damage to harness, etc. Fortunately there was no one in the vehicle at the time the runaway started, or some one might have been hurt.

Happenings in and Around Blair- more

J. C. Drenery, of Cowley, was in town on Monday.

A dance was given by the Banter club on Friday evening last.

Miss Crayford, of Gillingham, spent Thursday and Friday with friends in Blaimore.

The Loyal Orange Association will institute a subordinate lodge at Blaimore in January.

A service will be held in the Presbyterian church on Sunday morning next, at 11 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Sinclair are enjoying a visit from Mr. Sinclair's sister, Lillie, of Owen Sound.

W. J. Bartlett, manager of Bartlett and Barrett, leaves to-night on a visit to Edmonton and Irma.

R. C. Green and Miss Green go to Lundbrock today, where they will spend the yuletide with friends.

Joshua Kean and H. C. Morisset, of Cowley, came to town on Monday to attend the funeral of the late Frank Biemla.

W. E. Smith, formerly manager for A. MacDonald, Lethbridge, has been appointed manager of Mar On's general store.

Rev. J. W. Litch, B. A., who has been here since the 4th inst., concluding evangelistic meetings left on Wednesday for Vancouver.

Frank Simpson, of Nelson, B. C., has purchased the Albany hotel from Carroll and Milligan. The deal was put through on Friday last.

The new skating rink will be opened on Friday night if the weather permits. It is at the corner of Fourth avenue and State Street and Kall brothers are in charge.

J. A. Van Wie, manager of the Twin City scenic Co., of Minneapolis, was in town on Saturday last and secured a large order for scenery for the new Blaimore opera house.

The post office was removed from Dearborn Street on Wednesday to the corner of Victoria Street and Seventh avenue. This gives Blaimore as good a post office as can be found in the Pass.

The Baptist Sunday School will hold their Christmas tree entertainment on next Friday evening. All members, adherents and friends are invited. Bring all the little folk. Strangers are welcome.

Joseph G. F. Hudson, engineer of the mines department, Ottawa, arrived in town on Friday last. Mr. Hudson has been appointed by the Ottawa government to enquire into the recent disaster at Bellevue.

F. Woodyard, construction foreman for P. Burns & Co. and who has been in town during the past two months in connection with the building of the west market here, leaves this week for his home in Calgary.

Miss Ross, so long connected with the teaching staff of the Blaimore school, has accepted a similar position on the public school staff at Fernie, B. C., where she assumes service after the Christmas holidays.

L. P. Roberts, engineer for the West Canadian Collieries, left on Wednesday en route to Denver, Cal., where he will spend about two weeks, after which he will return to Blaimore with a life partner. Congratulations.

A Big Response to Alderson Fund

"Greater love hath no man than that a man lay down his life for his friends."

The BLAIRMORE ENTERPRISE has started a public subscription for the benefit of the wife and family of the late Fred Alderson, the Bellevue hero, and solicits subscriptions, whether large or small.

It will be remembered that Fred Alderson lost his life while rescuing men from the explosion there on December 9th. A nobler deed could never be done. We make this appeal with the full assurance that a large response will be made to this most noble cause.

The late Mr. Alderson was a pit boss and therefore his case does not come under the Compensation Act.

All subscriptions will be acknowledged through the columns of this paper.

The ENTERPRISE subscription list was only opened yesterday and already the following donations have been received at this office:

West Canadian Collieries $500.00;
R. Green, J. Menard, J. H. Farmer, S. J. Watson, Fryer & Shuch, $10.00 each; W. Ayers, A. W. Barnes, H. M. Bennett, Lyon & Hinds, Mar On, A. Manuel, The Blaimore Enterprise, $5.00 each; G. M. The Greatest Christmas Gift

"He gave His only begotten

Son."

The world stands upon the threshold of that season of the year when the thought of christdom instinctively turns to the most gladsome day in the annals of recorded time--

the birthday of the Saviour of the world.

We may not be able without finite understanding to comprehend the height and depth of the great plan which came forth from the mind of the Infinite and which comprehended

the salvation of the entire human race, but we find in the Inspired Word this passage of unmistakable import: "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him

should not perish, but have everlasting life."

In these words we find an epi-tom of the Divine plan. The motive and the reason are both given, and while we may marvel over what was comprehended in that plan, we accept it as a great truth and know that the emerging of the world from darkness to light dates from the hour when the Star of Bethlehem flashed across the Judean sky.

Jesus Christ was therefore

God's first Christmas gift to a

and weary world. No wonder that Heaven's joy-bell ringing. No wonder that the gates of Paradise seemed to open while angels looked down upon the scene.

In that hour was born the spirit of cheer, peace, on earth

and good will toward men

which has never died out during all the centuries, which have passed. There have been times when its splendor has seemed dimmed, and when men

appeared to forget the sentiments of that first Christmas

message, but on Christmas day itself, few there are who do not count it a privilege to journey

in imagination with the wise men of the East, to that humble cradle in the manger which the Christ-child made holy with its presence.

There is something irresistibly

appealing about the Christmas festival. It does not miss many in the world of to-day,

and Christian and heathen alike are carried away by the sublimity of its influence. It is the greatest educating power in the direction of better feeling and nobler impulses which is abroad. It brings the agnos-tic down from the towering heights of his self-sufficiency,
and it raises for a spell the sordid wretch in whom all the finer sense seems blunted, and places them together on one platform where they can look afresh upon the glory of ideal existence, through the eye of childhood.

The children do the teaching around Christmas tide with their clean fancies and their simple faith with its abounding confidence and its transcendent hope.

When it is recalled that the human mind is after all but a mass of impressions, what would be given in exchange for that sublime purity of youth?

Not surely the mind of the egotist with its vain imaginings, or that of the cynic hardened sinner with all youth's tender impressions smothered thickly over. And yet for a time these impressions, stirred by hallowed influences, are resurrected, and like the wise men of the east, all sorts and conditions of people are found on Christmas morning among the children, around the manger, adoring.

"Hark the herald angels sing
Glory to the new born King, while soft, tender thoughts
urge out of the dark caverns of memory.

The influence of that life which opened at Bethlehem has outlived all others. Like the fragrant perfume of a flower it has crept out through the world and all other odors are measured by its standard of sweetness. Believers and unbelievers alike have caught the spirit of that doctrine of simple love and humanity, and it is rapidly becoming the sheet anchor of the whole world, the test of civilization.

And because Christmas is the appealing festival familiar to the people from the earliest days so is its power all the greater. For once, at least in the year the name of Christ is taken into the mouth with some degree of sincerity in all manner of places. In the godless home, in the bar-room, amidst the carouse, and in the lowest, foulest dens there is a handicap and a wish which links them all in some way with the man Christ Jesus, the hope of the world and the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.

Ring, merry, joyous Christmas bells. Day of glad greetings, happy gatherings, good cheer and kind wishes. Enjoy the blessed occasion--enjoy it fully and rightfully. Make the Christmas of this year a day to which you can always look back with pleasure and gratitude. Peace and good will unto you, dear reader and a Merry, Merry Christmas to all.

Story of a Man Who Always Got What He Wanted.

By BERTHA TRÉVELYAN.

If it usually happened that Malloy got what he wanted in the world it was by no means due to chance. When he wanted anything he began by looking the field over carefully, noting all the salient points—the advantages and the disadvantages. Then with his feet up and a cigar between his lips he would consider all available methods of securing the thing desired.

Having finally arrived at a decision as to the best cover for his action to pursue, he pursued it with an energy and a single-mindedness that were open to no discouragement, admitting no defeat. And the result, was that, as life goes, Malloy was accounted lucky.

He was a handsome, vigorous man of fifty when, business affairs making it necessary for him to spend a number of months in New York, a letter of introduction secured him the very desirable privilege of rooms with the Fosters, whose story of winning fortunes he had heard from the friend who sent him to him. The ominous length of his upper lip was hidden under a short gray mustache, and Miss Foster would have known from the first that it was useless to oppose him.

Once his mind was set upon anything, he would not be turned aside. The romance of his youth was a beautiful memory, a thing as faint and elusive as the scent of lavender. But he had been loyal to it for twenty years, having been left at thirty a widower with two children.

In the great dim drawing room where everything was eloquent of other days he noticed several things—touches unusual in still city drawing rooms, but which made for something altogether out of keeping with his height, breadth and form.

In the midst of his reverie Miss Foster appeared, her delicate slenderness heightened by the massive doorway in which she stood framed for a moment. As he rose to greet her he noticed the tiny white handkerchief she held in her hand.

"You have mislaid it," he said in a calm, decided voice which somehow thrilled her with the certainty that he would bend her to his will.

"I have not," she said, looking at him with a certain defiance. "It is a matter of twenty-five cents."

"But I'm only 'thirty-two,'" she exclaimed, surprised into protest.

Malloy could have roared with laughter at the incident, only as he had supposed, then it was not that she really thought herself outside the pale; it was only as she sensitively feared that she ought to be obedient to him.

"But of course it is absurd for you to say such things to a woman of my age," he said, looking at her with a certain contempt. "You are not a child, and you are not a woman."

"I am a woman," she said, looking at him with a certain defiance. "I am a woman of fifty."

"But I'm only 'thirty-two,'" she exclaimed, surprised into protest.

gotten and tumbled down, and apparently Miss Foster's fear of appearing "disturbed" subsided. To Malloy each hour spent in her society made him long for her. She was so completely content.

Then of a sudden all the old pain returned to his memory. To Malloy each hour spent in her society made him long for her. She was so completely content.

As before, he divided the morning of all—name like word that had aroused all her dormant sensitiveness, and she was writing under it. She doubted whether that people were saying that that old maid, Marion Foster, was trying to catch Mr. Malloy, and her manner was but three, wordless rebuff of it. The lines of care were deepening in her face day by day, and his heart ached for help.

"I want to speak to you, Miss Foster," he said in a determined way as she was about to go to him in the morning. "I want to speak to you, Miss Foster," he said in a determined way as she was about to go to him in the morning.

"Certainly," she replied, somewhat uncomfortably, and they sat down in the study, the door closed behind them.

"Something is troubling you," he began, fixing his gaze earnestly upon her. "Come now, be frank. If there is any way in which I can be of service to you tell me."

"It is nothing," she protested hastily, "or, at least, nothing such." Then with an attempt at cheerfulness she added, "Women who have neither fathers nor brothers to look out for them often have to worry, you know."

Another sort of woman might have added "husbands," but to Miss Foster, whose consciousness upon the subjects of love and matrimony was as shrinkable as that of a young girl, such a remark would have been impossible. Even in that moment Malloy chafed at himself, yet would have liked to take her in his arms and put himself between her and the world forever.

"Hurry me," he said softly. "Give me the right to take care of you. I shall be a young girl's happiness."

Her face went scarlet.

"Such a subject seems scarcely the proper one for just," she returned with dignity. "If you will excuse me, I have duties to attend to," and she rose to leave him.

"One moment," he said, rising and catching her by the wrist. "You have a right to command. The Malloy who achieved what he wanted in life was speaking. Miss Foster seemed to feel that she was not down upon him as obediently as a child, though he could see that her hands were quivering nervously.

"You have mislaid it," he said in a calm, decided voice which somehow thrilled her with the certainty that he would bend her to his will.

Concerning the Ancient Guild of the Purbeck Marblers.

There is an industry carried on in Great Britain which is entirely free from strikes, lock-outs, and labor disputes in general.

This remarkable state of affairs is due to the simple fact that even the masters are the masters, and the masters are the masters.

The industry in which the corporation is engaged consists of quarrying the marble found in the Isle of Purbeck, a peninsula district of Dorsetshire. Nearly a hundred quarries are worked here, in what used to be a royal forest, and the whole of the industry is managed by a certain kind of trades guild, entitled, "The Ancient Guild of Purbeck Marblers."

All the marble belonging to the quarries of the original Purbeck quarrymen who formed the guild, and no other person has any right to the quarries. None other is allowed to join the guild. None can ever become a member of the guild save he be of the blood.

This peculiar guild has been in existence for many hundreds of years, probably, indeed, before the coming of the Normans. As these quarrymen, naturally, can usually be traced to the times beyond the Conquest, they are indeed aristocrats.

Some Notable Examples of Prevalence in Sleep.

Considerable interest has been taken in the story of a dream which came true, the person concerned being the wife of a Calcutta business man. While in Scotland, where she was on a visit home, news came from India that her husband had been drowned, and as the said intelligence was about to be gradually broken to her she immediately declared that she knew her husband was dead, as she had been warned of his death in a dream. The circumstance is curious, and difficult to explain. Whatever the explanation, this case of a dream coming true is only one of many well authenticated instances.

Perhaps the best known of all is that which the lady William Russell, mother of the ninth Duke of Bedford, used to tell about the death of her uncle, the first Marquis of Hastings, who had brought her up. Lady William dreamed that she saw a crowd of people, and among them a number of female figures were standing in an attitude of grief. "Did you not know I was dead?" she asked, and then how it looked on the other side, and Lord Hastings told her quite differently. "Did you not know I was dead?" she asked, and then how it looked on the other side, and Lord Hastings told her quite differently.

Another instance is that of the Duke of Devonshire, who dreamed that he saw a crowd of people, and among them a number of female figures were standing in an attitude of grief. "Did you not know I was dead?" she asked, and then how it looked on the other side, and Lord Hastings told her quite differently.

IMPOVERISHED BLOOD.

A Common and Dangerous Trouble—You Must Enrich the Blood to Escape Danger.

Anemia is simply a lack of blood. It is one of the most common diseases of the same time most dangerous diseases with which growing girls suffer. It is common because the blood is often becomes impoverished during development, when girls are too frequently allowed to overstudy, overwork and suffer from a lack of exercise. It is dangerous because of the weakness of its approach, often being well developed before its presence is recognized, and because of its tendency to grow so steadily worse that it is not promptly checked, that it may run into consumption.

The value of the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be known to every mother in the land. It is a simple, safe, and effective remedy, and it is a common disease of the same time most dangerous diseases with which growing girls suffer. A sprained ankle will usually disable the injured person for three or four weeks. This is due to lack of proper treatment. When Chamberlain's Liniment is applied a cure may be effected in three or four days. This liniment is one of the best and most remarkable preparations in use. Sold by dealers everywhere.
